In this regard, CICAD, along with states of the Hemisphere that have made progress in the area, will present, during the first half of 2002, a proposal for a basic, homogeneous methodology applicable to all countries.

FINAL COMMENT

Although Antigua and Barbuda has drawn up a broad National Drug Plan, which contemplates both the provisions of international instruments and the various manifestations of the drug problem, CICAD urges it to comply with the provisions of the United Nations Convention of 1988 and other specialized international instruments and to strengthen mechanisms for international cooperation.

Furthermore, CICAD is concerned at the fact that the country’s actions have been delayed pending adoption of the National Drug Plan, which provides a policy framework but is not a prerequisite for developing plans and programs.
